

"MAY YOHE GOT ALL FROM JEWELS OF HERS I PAWNED."

—CAPT. P. B. STRONG.

Captain Says All He Pledged Was $8,400, and that the Woman Had Every Dollar of This—Declares that He Took Nothing He Did Not Own.

LONDON, July 24.—Capt. Putnam Bradlee Strong this evening said he had pawned about $8,400 worth of May Yohe's jewelry at her request and for her benefit after they returned from Japan, and that Miss Yohe had received the entire proceeds from him at the time the jewels were pawned.

"I have never had one dollar of May Yohe's money and no person knows it better than she," continued Capt. Strong.

"The money on which I am now travelling was received from the sale of my library, and of this fact May Yohe is also aware. I have done many foolish and most unwise things, but I have not been criminal.

"As to my future movements, I don't think they should interest any one greatly. But I will say that I purpose living quietly and endeavoring to redeem my good name.

"As to the story that I rifled her deposit box, that is absurd on its face. May Yohe never had any safety deposit box that I know of, and if she had one any banker could tell you that without her authority I could never have had access to it.

"I had one in my own name at the Knickerbocker Trust Company, which I suppose my family has opened as I gave them full authority to do so."

Capt. Putnam Bradlee Strong got to London to-day via Southampton on the St. Paul.

May Yohe, as soon as she heard it, sailed on the Fuerst Bismarck, which also stops at Southampton.

Capt. Strong denies taking her jewels and declares she said he had just because he left her.

Cable despatches say he was booked as "Mr. Allen" and was very attentive to a young woman passenger on the way over.

MAY YOHE FOLLOWS STRONG TO LONDON.

When The Evening World called up May Yohe at her pretty little cottage at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, this morning, and told her its correspondent had reported the arrival of Putnam Bradlee Strong at Southampton, on the steamer St. Paul, she fairly shrieked over the telephone:

"I'm not saying anything. Just watch me."

Her Departure Hasty. Then there was a scurrying about the cottage, a rush of orders by telephone and telegraph. Trunks had been packed, for May Yohe had agreed to depart as one of the conditions to the payment of $19,880 by the Strong family for the redemption of her jewels.

Where she would go was an unsolved problem until the word reached her that Capt. Strong had arrived in Southampton. She had been told he was bound for England, but the rumor came from his family and she mistrusted it as a tip intended to deceive her.

Now "Miss M. Bachelor." Within an hour after the cable brought word of Capt. Strong's arrival she and her mother, a woman friend and her colored butler were on their way to New York.

From Grand Central Station a carriage whisked them to the ferry, and they arrived in Hoboken half an hour before the Fuerst Bismarck's sailing time.

The Yohe woman's lawyer, accompanied by a New York detective, met the party on the steamship pier. He handed Miss Yohe her tickets and told her the passage had been engaged for "Miss M. Bachelor and companion."

Miss Yohe indulged in a smile at the ironical reference in the name to her "widowhood."

Miss Yohe was very nervous but looked extremely well in a sailing gown of blue cloth. Her uniform coat was ornamented with large gilt buttons. Her hat was extremely large and the plume would have been quite conspicuous, but it was hidden by a green veil, over which a black veil was loosely thrown to prevent her being recognized by those on the pier.

(Special to The Evening World.)
WASHINGTON PARK, July 24.—To the brink of old Gowanus did Johnny McGraw lead his boys from New York again to-day. His purpose was in keeping with the schedule, and his plan was to make Hanlon's ballplayers feel as though they were away from home. It was bad enough to have done so yesterday, but before the fair inhabitants of this borough it would have been more humiliating this afternoon.

That was because this day marked the weekly occasion when the silk-waisted ones can sweep into the grand stand without having to push a turnstile around on its bearings.

Girls Flocked to the Game. In a word, it was ladies' day. And how the girls did come. They arrived in throngs. It looked like rain, but that did not worry them. Brooklyn girls always take all sorts of chances with the weather. When Ned Hanlon set aside a day every week for the free admission of ladies he knew what he was about.

Many Panama-hatted chappies who would ordinarily rather loiter around a beach than see a ball game gave the necessary fee to the ticket agents to-day and took seats in the grand stand usually where there was a good assemblage of the fair ones.

Crowd a Big One. They swelled the attendance a bit, and together with that big crowd which paid their way to see a good game of baseball and nothing more made the attendance another banner one.

It was the same old anxious, cheering crowd too, and great was the noise that rent the low hanging clouds. Brooklyn's fair enthusiasts know a lot about baseball and their shrill voices were often heard cheering the work of their favorites.

They think Willie Keeler the cutest little fellow in the world, and handsome Jimmy Sheppard was another who appealed to their fancies.

Giants Looked Like Winners. Well, a good game was in view. The old wall "It's a sure game for Brooklyn" was never heard at any time. Instead was the remark, "Those New York fellows are all right and they look like winners."

There was one thing which made the girls in the stand happy. It was the announcement before the game that Christy Mathewson would probably pitch for the Giants.

The stake fixture was the Brighton Oaks, for three-year-old fillies. This race was at a mile, the only one at this distance during the meeting. The field was small but good and a new record was expected by the talent. The other races were interesting and good sport was promised.

The weather was cool and pleasant. A delightful ocean breeze swept through the stand.

The track was lightning fast.

350 MEN STRIKE ON NEW BRIDGE.

Sympathetic Trouble Causes All the Bridge Men and Painters to Go Out at 2.30 This Afternoon.

All the structure-workers, bridge-men and painters, 350 men in all, working on the new Williamsburg bridge, joined this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in a sympathetic strike. The only men who remained at work were the men employed by the Howells.

The trouble was caused by the announcement that the Pennsylvania Steel Company, which hired the Williamsburg bridge, had decided to employ the Howells. The Howells claim is untenable.

It is asserted here that the island was annexed to Japan in 1895 and that it was discovered by a Japanese subject in 1897.

Fitz in Fine Condition.

Those who fancy Fitz admit that he has the disadvantage of age, but argue that he has had an exemplary life and is younger to-day than the average man of forty. That he is trained to the hour is beyond question. Fitz has never made such preparations for a battle. He is as fit as a man of his age can be made. This being known, the short-enders are looking upon

MINEOLA WINS ANOTHER RACE.

Muriel Loses Her Topmast, but Finishes—Dorwin First in Her Class at Larchmont Regatta.

LARCHMONT, N. Y., July 24.—A fresh southwest breeze furnished a good day's racing. The three 75-foot schooners, the Elmina, the Muriel and the Quissetta, again tried their luck and the Mineola and the Yankee had another battle. The Rainbow was also entered. The 60-footers, the Neola and the Westmore, were competitors and the other classes were pretty much as yesterday.

The leading yachts started in the following order:
Mineola, 11:35.35; Rainbow, 11:35.55; Yankee, 11:35.40; Elmina, 11:41.30; Muriel, 11:40.15; Neola, 11:45.12; Westmore, 11:45.07; Dorwin, 11:40.00; Muriel, 11:50.56; Quissetta, 11:51.40.

The Mineola finished at 2:25.50, the Yankee at 2:25.30 and the Rainbow at 2:20.05. The Muriel won the race, the Muriel lost her foremast, but finished with the Elmina. The Dorwin won in her class.

JAPANESE CRUISER TO MARCOS ISLAND

American Expedition Is on the Way, but Instructions Have Been Given to Avoid a Clash.

YOKOHAMA, July 24.—It is officially announced that the Japanese cruiser Kaga will convey the diplomatic agent of Japan to Marcos Island, 80 miles southeast of Yokohama. The explanation is that it is the desire of the government to reassure the Japanese residents and convince them that the Rosehill claim is untenable.

It is asserted here that the island was annexed to Japan in 1895 and that it was discovered by a Japanese subject in 1897.

An American expedition under Capt. Rosehill is now on the way to Marcos Island for the purpose of exploiting the guano deposits.

Capt. Rosehill claims he has a prior right of ownership in the island. He has been instructed not to offer resistance to the Japanese.

BELMONT GETS THE TUNNEL.

Contract for Brooklyn Extension Awarded on the $3,000,000 Bid— Broadway Extension Not Voted On—May Be Another Tunnel.

By a unanimous vote the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners this afternoon decided to award the contract for building the Brooklyn tunnel extension of the subway to the Belmont-McDonald syndicate.

The bid offering to do the work for $3,000,000, including terminals, was the one accepted. This does not include the pro- posed extension in Broadway from Forty-second street to Union Square, on which project no ac- tion was taken.

The bid was accepted over the protests of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, backed by several citizens of Brooklyn, who asserted that the award of the contract to the Belmont-McDonald syndicate would involve an extra five-cent fare between Brooklyn Borough Hall and Manhattan.

The vote was taken after a long public hearing. President Orr was the first to cast his vote. He had it recorded in favor of the Belmont-McDonald syndicate bid.

Mayor Explains Vote. Before Mayor Low voted he said he would like to explain why he cast his vote for the Belmont-McDonald bid. He was exceedingly grateful to the people of Brooklyn for all they had done for him and for the honors they had conferred upon him, but in his present position he felt that the responsibility for the best interests of the Greater New York rested on him, and for that reason he would vote for the Belmont bid.

The other Commissioners voted for Belmont. President Orr appointed Mayor Low, Comptroller Drout and Commissioners Smith and Starin a committee to award the contract for the work to the Belmont syndicate.

After the vote was taken giving the construction of the tunnel under the river to the Belmont Syndicate, President Orr introduced a resolution pledging the Board to expend the sum remaining in the fund, amounting to between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000, for a system of rapid transit from the Brooklyn Borough hall to the Island of Manhattan, and that this system should be for the benefit of Brooklyn, with such arrangements as could be made for transfers and other benefits. This is taken to mean that there will be a second tunnel.

August Belmont was represented at the hearing by John B. McDonald and other powers of the subway company. The opposing Brooklyn Rapid Transit interests were represented by President Orr and other leaders of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. But President Swanstrom, of the Borough of Brooklyn, was on hand to oppose anything the B. R. T. might suggest. Mayor Low was late in arriving.

When the matter of awarding contracts came up, letter from E. M. Shepard, counsel for the Commissioners in which he said the Board had the power to award the contract to the McDonald company for the Broadway extension of the tunnel from Forty-second street to Union Square, but said the contract should not be awarded without further specifications.

No move in advance of the meeting of the Rapid Transit Commission this afternoon was made by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to reach a settlement with the city authorities whereby the company—in spite of the adverse action of the Board of Aldermen, would eventually gain an entrance into the city and be enabled to build its underground connecting line between Jersey City and Long Island.

It was learned that the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is to take no steps just now. Those interested in the railroad company's plans know that the granting of the franchise is favored not only by the Rapid Transit Commission but also by the Mayor and Comptroller, and their intention is to allow these influential factors in the city government time to use their efforts toward a resolution of the adverse elements in the administration before they take any steps.

This conclusion, it is believed, was reached at a conference with Mayor John B. McDonald and John P. Green, of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Make Time for the Business Man. The Pennsylvania Railroad has been told to leave New York 1:55 P. M. daily.
